"The German official report and the ord for September. The same thing re- French and British orders prove how little mains true of a year back, the same truth there is in the pretense of the enemy that it was not intended to continue the attack which began on September 2 and was stopped by the Germans,

"The object of the attack was to drive the Germans from French soil, but the only results obtained on the entire front were in one place to the extent of twenty three kilometres and in another of twelve kilometres, and these results were not obtained by the military achievements of the attacking British, but by a successful surprise resulting from an attack with gas. In these sections the first German line was pressed into the second line, which is by no means the last line.

"According to conservative estimates the French losses in dead, wounded and prisoners were 130,000, and the British lesses 60,000. (This portion of the German report was received from Berlin yesterd y by way of London.) The German losses were not one-fifth of this number."

Allies' Victory Not Brilliant. The remaining portion of the war office nunication is summarized as follows by the Overseas News Agency.

The headquarters statement says further that such local successes as were obtained were gained with seven-fold nusuperiority prepared for by material from the factories of half the world, and that they cannot be called "brilliant victories."

"Army headquarters says further that only one German division which was on its way from the western front was retained at the beginning of the enemy's attacks, and that other divisions were assigned to take the place for which the detained division was destined. Otherwise the plans of the German army were not influenced in any way by the attack, which at no place penetrated beyond the second line, and nowhere rendered impos sible movement of reserves just as was done in May, when the offensive movement at Arras was made."
